This application will attempt to locate any proxies that may have been added to the Windows registry. ProxyFinder is designed to find any existing proxy settings in the Registry Key HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE/SOFTWARE/Microsoft/Windows/CurrentVersion/Internet Settings/Proxy/Proxies. The key is a list of links to the proxy URLs in JSON-formatted text. Once the program identifies proxies in the Registry it creates a WCF service which will attempt to locate any proxies that have already been added to the proxy server. What's New In?

Proxy Finder is a simple program that will help you find the proxy settings for the local network. What is a proxy? A proxy is basically a web proxy that acts as an intermediary between the local computer and websites, thus allowing you to see the website pages from a different location than your local one. Proxy means server that you share resources (internet) with another user, no matter where they are located geographically. Why you need to use a proxy? There are many reasons why you need to use a proxy: Sometimes you need to see sites that are blocked by your local administrator or the country that you are in. Sometimes you are on a LAN that is part of a larger network and need to access websites that are only available to other computers on your LAN. Wanted to access websites that are only available in other countries. You might be living in a country that blocks a lot of websites or you might be living in a country with a bad Internet connection. Proxy is the best solution. How to create your own proxy? Open a new network connection and click "Options...". In "Internet options...", on the "Connections" tab, under "LAN settings...", under "Lan Settings...", on the "Proxy..." tab, Under "Proxy server...", type your local IP address. Under "Type of proxy...", select "Remote Host". Once you have selected all of your settings click ok. Now reload the page you want to access. Batch file: This is a big help. To make your own batch files you first need to know what the terminal looks like. A terminal is basically a command line. To make a command line, you need to press the [ctrl] plus [alt] + [#] and you get a little bar in the middle of your screen. In this case we will make a batch file which search for any IP and if it gets none it will try to make one for you. Place all the commands that you need in this batch and then save it as a batch file. The batch file should always be saved in the Documents folder. To see what your IP is, type `ipconfig /all` in the Terminal or CMD, in the Windows look, look in the properties and see the IP address. To edit your IP, you need to change your settings in the "Connections" tab from the "Options..." window. Now let's make a
